

Written evidence submitted Keith Alexander Mallen (IPB 12)

I am a private individual. You might associate me with others who have similar concerns about this Bill and wider matters. As far as I am concerned I act independently but could not claim others opinions do not influence my own. I would like to think I can rationalise sides of arguments but perhaps this submission suggests otherwise.

I have a Joint Honours Degree in Applied Science, Physics and Chemistry. A Higher National Certificate in Electronics and Communications Engineering. I have been employed as an Electronics Assembler, Test Technician and Design Engineer. Worked on an IT Help Desk and get to fix other peoples computers. There is more but none of the previous qualifies me as an 'Expert'.

Please refer to the Conclusion for a Summary.

Section 1) Definition of an ICR

If I am to understand correctly then an Internet Connection Record or ICR comprises a Time, Source and Destination. The Time is when the Source Visits a Destination. The Source is the IP Address from which the Visit originates. The Destination is the Top Level Domain where the desired Content is Hosted. The ICR does not include or permit recording of Content.

Section 2) The Domain Name System

Content is stored on The Internet at locations identified by IP Addresses represented as Numbers. Humans are not very good with Numbers so a System is provided whereby Names are Translated to Numbers.

Section 3) Domain Name Servers

Domain Name Servers provide the aforementioned Translation Service. All of the Major Internet Service Providers, ISPs, implement their own Domain Name Servers, DNS. Equipment provided to end users is tied to the ISPs Domain Name Servers.

Section 4) Parental Controls

All of the Major ISPs are now required to implement Parental Controls whereby, if enabled, access to certain Destinations on The Internet can be blocked. Parental Controls are based on the Domain Name System. These controls are already paid for, in place and operating.

Section 5) WireShark

WireShark is a freely available Open Source Network Protocol Analyser. I have installed it on my Desktop Computer. It allows me to monitor my Network Traffic. In effect I am performing an Interception of Communications on myself.

Section 6) WireShark and DNS

I can set up WireShark to Filter the Information it collects. In the following example I am only

Time	Source	Destination	Protocol	Length
0.000	192.168.1.2	192.168.1.1	DNS	77
Standard query 0x58e8 A stackoverflow.com
Domain Name System (query)
Time	Source	Destination	Protocol	Length
0.031	192.168.1.1	192.168.1.2	DNS	157
Standard query response 0x58e8 A 104.16.34.249
Domain Name System (response)

collecting DNS or Destination Requests. It has been 'edited for clarity'.

The previous resulted from me using my Web Browser to visit the site stackoverflow.com and in order to get there my browser made a Domain Name System (query) to the DNS Servers provided by my ISP, SKY, and those Servers provided a Domain Name System (response)telling my Web Browser the Location, IP Address 104.16.34.246, of that particular Page.

Section 7) WireShark, DNS and Parental Controls

In the previous example 'Source' and 'Destination' might cause some confusion. The numbers do not reference the SKY Domain Name Servers but represent my Home or Local Area Network.

Standard query 0x3c57 A www.southern-charms.com
Standard query response 0x3c57 A 90.207.238.183
GET /lola/photos.htm HTTP/1.1
HTTP/1.1 302 Found
Standard query 0x59a6 A block.nb.sky.com
Standard query response 0x59a6 CNAME nmbs1.sky.com A 80.238.6.34
GET /?domain=www.southern-charms.com&categories=PORNOGRAPHY&match_user_blacklist=false HTTP/1.1

With Parental Controls switched on,

The previous, again edited for clarity, resulted from me using my Web Browser to try and visit,

My Web Browser requests the Location of www.southern-charms.com but the SKY DNS, along with the Parental Control System, recognises that this might be pornography and returns an incorrect IP address, 90.207.238.183, owned by SKY. My Web Browser goes to that IP address and asks for /lola/photos.htm, The Content, and since it is now looking in the wrong place it ultimately ends up on a SKY Block Page.

In part the above was to remove confusion about 'Source' and 'Destination' in the WireShark Log. I am in fact relying on the DNS as supplied by my ISP. More importantly it demonstrates how my Web Browser, and for that matter other 'services' that I use operate in respect of DNS queries.

Specifically they only request, as per Section 1), the IP address of the Top Level Domain and, unless any other interference occurs, that is all the ISP gets to see. There is no record of the Page or its Content. This is the definition and requirement of an Internet Connection Record, ICR, and the ISPs have already implemented, paid for and have in place a system that can provide those ICRs.

Section 8) The ISP Cost Fallacy and WireShark

Certain ISPs have presented evidence to previous committees expressing their concerns in respect of the cost of implementation of a system capable of providing ICRs. It should be apparent from the above that they already have the technical capability to do this.

What appears to be missing is the cost of recording and storage of Data for the proposed period of Twelve Months. The amount of Data is claimed to be 'massive'.

As previously suggested I set up WireShark to only record DNS Location Requests from my computer. I might qualify as an 'above average' user in terms of browsing and logged those Requests for just over One Hour. On export the resulting Text File had a size of 1 Mega-Bytes but contained information that would not be relevant to an ICR.

I wrote a program to strip the superfluous information out. The following shows the results at the beginning and end of the session.

This is, in effect, an ICR gathered over One Hour of browsing. Time in seconds, Source IP Address and Destinations. Again note that my Local Area Network address, 192.168.1.2, ultimately gets reported to my ISP as my assigned and external Wide Area Network address, 87.81.177.97.

The size of the associated Text File is 33 Kilo-Bytes. A Text File is not be the most efficient way of storing data and there are other techniques that would reduce the size further. For example de-duplication. Otherwise working with the 33KB figure,

$$33K(\text{Hourly DNS}) \times 24(\text{Hours}) \times 365(\text{Days}) \times 60 \text{ Million}(\text{UK Population}) = 1.7 \times 10^{16} \text{ bytes}$$

That would be 17,000 Tera Bytes of Data to be stored for one year assuming the whole of the UK population is the average ME and the whole of the UK population has an Internet connection, uses it 24 hours a day for 365 days a year and only gets their Internet connection through a single ISP. It does indeed sound like a big number but some perspective is required.

Section 9) The ISP Cost Fallacy and Tape Storage

A quick Google, apparently it became a verb some time ago, suggests that Tape Storage costs 1 US Cent per Giga Byte.

$$1.7 \times 10^{16} \div 1 \times 10^9 \div 100 = \text{US$}170,000$$

Which appears to be slightly shy of the UK£174,000,000, by a factor of one thousand, that the Government is offering and wildly below the £Billions the ISPs are saying this will cost.

You have to be able to write the Data to Tape in the time that is available. The IBM TS1150 is capable of a Sustained Transfer Speed of 1265GB/Hr or  $1.27 \times 10^{12}$  bytes/Hr

$$33\text{K}(\text{Hourly DNS}) \times 60 \text{ Million}(\text{UK Population}) = 1.98 \times 10^{12} \text{ bytes/Hr}$$

The capability is quite close,  $1.98 \times 10^{12}$  required versus  $1.27 \times 10^{12}$  achievable so we run two storage units in parallel. Again this assumes all the users all the time just using one ISP. The solution seems easily achievable and at a cost orders of magnitude less than that proposed by the Government and even more so compared to that suggested by the ISPs.

Section 10) The Pre-Fetch Problem

In order to reduce delays during browsing due to DNS latency, the time between requesting a particular IP Address for a particular domain and the request being serviced, when a browser loads a page it looks for 'passive' links, those that might be clicked on later. Consequently the information is immediately available should the user choose to click on one of those links.

Unfortunately the ISP will be unable to determine whether the user subsequently clicks on and visits one of those links. Furthermore having visited, for example, facebook.com the browser maintains the IP Address for that site in its local cache so visits to other pages on that site will not be seen via DNS.

Other than 'false' data the question is how granular knowledge of a persons browsing needs to be. Knowing that someone visited Facebook, but not which pages they visited, a number of times over any period of time, may not realistically generate further useful information assuming the information was of use to begin with.

Otherwise there is a solution to this Pre-Fetch Problem which arises from the Time To Live, TTL, imposed on DNS entries. This is a value in seconds that the IP address reported for a given Domain will be valid. If that time expires the browser will perform another request. Accordingly all the ISP has to do is set their DNS systems to report low or zero values for TTL.

Section 11) The Third Party Content Problem

A Web Page is composed of a number of elements, some 'visible' others not. The base Content will be hosted by that Site, First Party, or it will be pulled in from elsewhere, Third Party. Accordingly a visit to an innocuous Site could result in for example Bestiality Content arriving Third Party.

The First Party Content Provider could be acting maliciously or their site may have been compromised. The same may apply to the Third Party Content Provider. This is already a major problem for the Advertising Industry in the form of Malvertising. Of course such spurious or non-recurring events might be ignored.

Of course we have to trust that this data is being recorded and stored for later retrieval and analysis. Assuming the data is of use might it not be better for such an event to be flagged resulting in immediate and deeper scrutiny even if it is spurious. Either way it could be used as an excuse for 'fishing' either at that time or at a later date.

Section 12) The IP Address Problem

I pay for a Static IP Address from my ISP otherwise I would be assigned one Dynamically which is subject to change. This of itself should not be an issue because in order to obtain that Address and indeed use their connection services I have to 'log in' to their equipment. Therefore, as the 'account holder', they know exactly who I am.

Unfortunately any number of other people could be set up to gain access to the wider Internet via that IP Address with their identity being unknown. In effect the DNS information becomes mixed or otherwise poisoned. Do I become a 'suspect' because someone else I live with mistakenly or deliberately visits a 'dodgy link'.

Furthermore whilst I have a level of knowledge about system security and have locked down the Wireless Connection of my Modem/Router as best as I know how what of a member of the General Public who is not so well informed and has unwittingly left their equipment open to abuse from a passer by.

In addition what happens when the ISP allows their equipment to be used for such purposes such as is the case with the BT Home Hub on Infinity. Unaware Customers discover that this Public Wi-Fi is enabled by default and available to both other BT customers and the general paying public. The former may be identifiable what if the latter uses a 'top-up' credit card.

Generally this and the previous section raises concerns over false and/or unintended positives whereby insubstantial suspicion is aroused resulting in a deeper and unwarranted intrusion.

Section 13) The Criminal Element Problem

With a little knowledge it is trivial to bypass the Parental Controls as implemented by the ISPs. As an example you set up your computer to query another freely available DNS service thus avoiding the one provided by the ISP. Google provides such a service as does OpenDNS.

Of course DNS requests are sent and returned over Port 53. Google 'Port Numbers' for the Wikipedia page. So perhaps the solution is to block traffic that travels over Port 53 unless it is going to a Government approved DNS server but you then need to know which traffic is being passed via Port 53 requiring more invasive methods.

All of a sudden the Criminals will set up their own DNS using freely available open source software, for example BIND, and perhaps make it available to others on a different Port. No doubt they are doing this already. Do we now ban software that has not been approved by the Government or otherwise insist it is 'crippled'.

Whilst this submission is about ICRs the same considerations apply to the subject of Encryption and indeed any other associated technology. I suppose the Criminal will 'shop elsewhere' whilst the General Populace is placed at a disadvantage as they Abide by The Law.

Section 14) Who Gets 'Targeted'?

It would seem that the generation of ICRs for the Law Abiding, and ignorant, Public is a trivial and low cost exercise. Unfortunately Hardcore Criminals are not going to appear on this particular implementation of the ICR Radar unless they make a mistake. The same is likely to be true for any other implementation restricted to the proposed Data Set.

Of course you might capture some low hanging fruit but they might reasonably be expected to be harvested using more precise tools but otherwise you will be identifying 'victims' amongst a sea of worthless data and false positives after the event whereby that event may include something reprehensible and/or tragic.

Then consider that whilst this apparent solution to ICRs is available and cost effective the Government is still in discussions with the ISPs as to how to achieve them whilst haggling over what are substantially greater costs.

Section 15) The Itemised Telephone Bill Fallacy

Given I have the technology to create my own Internet Connection Record I present it in Annex 1). It will be representative of my browsing habits. Yes I look at Porn and download Lingerie Pictures and have other fetishes. I also visit various financial, news content and 'activist' websites and I do Online Banking. There will be other stuff... I've even tried to include making bombs.

Please assume the role of Voyeur and enjoy my travels... Go On, you know you want to. Visit some of the recorded Top Level Domains and broaden your horizons.

Having descended into my 'personal' pit of filth and slime ask yourself whether it represents an Itemised Telephone Bill and whether you would like yours to be recorded and stored for Twelve months and subsequently have it analysed by me? It is important that you understand that possibility.

In my case/example, if I were to be concerned, then it might be slightly embarrassing. I cannot vouch for someone in a more important position but I can certainly understand their concerns not so much that they might visit a porn Web Site but rather that with sufficient processing their Political, Religious and other ideals might be revealed.

Otherwise for myself the information gathered is less revealing than an Itemised Telephone Bill. It is just pornography noise.

Section 16) Value of Data Fallacy

If this, Annex 1), is what is to be collected in terms of an ICR for every Internet user in the UK for storage and subsequent analysis then in my view and in my case it is worthless. I could visit, <http://www.haystack.com/needle> and you would not find the needle but you have added everything else including The Kitchen Sink to your search in order to dilute the information further.

It may be microscopically marginally more useful for someone doing Behaviourally Targeted Advertising or you might become 'suspicious' about a minor 'transgressor'.. if you looked hard enough. Perhaps some of the data and its timing could be used to identify which particular News Article I read on a particular News Domain but the correlation would insignificant.

Conclusion

I believe I have demonstrated that collection of information required for what is now defined as an ICR is a simple exercise that can be done at low cost with equipment that is already in place with minimal additions. Of course there are some minor technical issues but none that would justify spending the amounts of money being discussed.

The major problem is that it is trivial for people, Criminal or Otherwise, to avoid having their ICRs recorded according to the proposed method. The solution is to implement Interception of Communications using Wide Scale, Full On, Hard Core Deep Packet Inspection.

This is not about what data should be collected or its access and use. That discussion is a Red Herring. It is an effort to hide how it will be collected.

This is all about 'technical means and capability' as exercised by GCHQ, in association with others, prior to being 'exposed', and the maintenance and extension of that 'technical means and capability'.

One flick of the switch, assuming it is not permanently on, and this represents the “technical means and capability” for Mass Surveillance.
